Regulation of Natural Products – a GA eSeminar series

The regulation of natural products is a global challenge, given the multitude of regulatory pathways and different approaches globally. Therefore, GA, the Society for Medicinal Plants and Natural Product research, steps in a series of lectures on Regulatory Affairs for (traditional) herbal medicinal products, herbal food supplements (so called botanicals), and substance-based medical devices, with leading experts from industry, authorities and academia worldwide as lecturers. The aim is to help in differentiating the different market niches for herbal products in the countries of this world and to reveal pros and cons of the categories. Part A of the eSeminar, in autumn 2021, gave an overview of the regulation of mainly supply and quality of the products from different regulatory pathways.

Part B of the eSeminar series in spring 2022, with four issues, will give insights to the regulation of the different types of natural products in different regions worldwide, again presented by renowned experts in the field.

The first issue will be dedicated to Europe, with lectures on the three key regulatory categories for natural products in the EU:

- The European system for herbal medicinal products: A good moment to look ahead:
Dr. Emiel van Galen, CBG-MED, Utrecht, and HMPC, Amsterdam, The Netherlands
- Substance-based Medical Devices: Emiliano Giovagnoni, Aboca spa, Sansepolcro, Italy
- Botanicals under Food regulation: Dr. Luca Bucchini, Hylobates Consulting Srl, Roma, Italy

The following issues of part B are focussing on the Americas and East Asia.
